

An abstract painting by Iva Šlitrová. The central focus is a face rendered in shades of blue and white, with a beard. To its right is another face, more defined and looking towards the viewer. The background is a complex composition of colors (blue, yellow, pink, white) and the word 'TVAR' (meaning 'form' or 'shape' in Czech) is written repeatedly in bold, black, hand-drawn letters. The overall style is expressive and gestural.
